

Richard Cheshul

General Manager
Boston Back Bay

Richard Cheshul began his hospitality career in a small New Brunswick, New Jersey, restaurant, the Round Grill, while he studied at Rutgers University. He began as a server and was promoted to management within the first year because of his customer-focused attitude and attention to detail.

After five years, Cheshul enjoyed the fast-paced environment so much that he decided to pursue experience in larger restaurant venues and joined McCormick & Schmick's management team. Within only a few months, Cheshul was invited to relocate to the restaurant's Park Square location in Boston where he managed everything from the service staff to the beverage program.

Smith & Wollensky recognized the opportunity to combine Cheshul's passion for hospitality perfection with a world-class brand and invited Cheshul to join the Boston Back Bay team in 2008. With his great leadership ability and drive to exceed guests' expectations, Cheshul quickly moved up the management ladder and was soon asked to take charge of the steakhouse in 2011.

As general manager, Cheshul maintains his customer-focused attitude and attention to detail, ensuring each guest is treated to impeccable service, and every famous signature steak is perfectly served.
